My name is Dayton Wiksten and I'll briefly speak for myself by noting what I think this issue is fundamentally about. And respect is the word that comes to mind. Respect for the county and its residents. Let's talk about this "special interest group" (which is really just an overly dignified term used in hopes that you actually take them seriously). Obviously, this "special interest group" has no respect for either the land or the people. And it's seeming more and more like the commissioner's feel the same way. So naturally the people can't respect you, and you see how the whole thing starts to fall apart. These might seem like vague unverifiable comments but all of it becomes very simple when you realize this pattern of disrespect is exemplified in one situation and one man. I think Joe Avery is a genuinely wonderful person, but I understand these things shouldn't just be based off who someone likes or dislikes. It's questionable if you understand that but don't worry, I'll just move on. The point is if you refuse to respect your own citizens, so you can serve the interests of an out of the area non taxpaying group, who doesn't respect the land, the people, or even you commissioner's, everyone will lose faith Shoshone County. Now I understand this kind of stuff is hard for you, so let's just take baby steps and start by treating good old Joe Avery with a little decency. Thank you.
